

Using Law and Policy to Reduce Risk, Enhance Coherence and Protect People

How can law and policy frameworks ensure a more coherent approach to reducing disaster risk and adapting to climate change at regional, national and subnational levels? How should National Societies engage with governments and partners to ensure inclusive approaches and the needs of the most vulnerable are addressed in law and policy making?

Tune into the DRR/CCA Legal Coherence Session during the Climate Red Summit to find out more!

Join us for an interactive discussion with National Societies, governments, regional/international partners and academics to share experiences, good practice and recommendations.

For more information and to register, please look for our session (Session ID: 259) on <https://go.climate.red/sessions>.
